1 Samuel 8 on what kings will do to Israel:

1. He will take your stuff – 1 Samuel 8:10-12, 14-18
2. He will take your daughters – 1 Samuel 8:13

Their response: 1 Samuel 8:19-22
There are 2 accounts of Saul’s election:
1. The “lost donkey” story – 1 Samuel 9
2. The “chosen by lot” story – 1 Samuel 10:20 should read, “the tribe of Benjamin was taken by lot.”
The Move to Monarchy 1 Samuel 7-12

Saul’s kingship is reaffirmed at Gilgal – 1 Samuel 11:14-15

Samuel exhorts the people to do well in the sight of God – 1 Samuel 12
The Trials of Saul – 1 Samuel 13-15

Saul’s unauthorized offering – 1 Samuel 13:8-9, 13-14.
The Trials of Saul – 1 Samuel 13-15

Saul’s charge to fast during war and Jonathan’s disobedience – 1 Samuel 14

The tension in the text seems to be there on purpose: We see a clash between moderate pragmatism on the one hand and an ethic that attaches great importance to oaths and vows on the other. In this case, Saul is cast as the defender of the ethic of obedience.
The Trials of Saul – 1 Samuel 13-15

1 Samuel 15 – What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear? (1 Samuel 15:14)

1. 1 Samuel 13:3-4 He takes credit for Jonathan’s victory.

2. 13:8-9 – Saul offers unauthorized sacrifice.

4. 15:9, 23-24 – Saul keeps the best sheep & other animals of the Amalekites.

5. 15:13 – Saul lies, saying he kept the commandments.
The Downfall of Saul

6. 18:7-8 – Saul becomes jealous of David’s successes.

7. 18:10-11 – Saul attacks David with a javelin.

8. 18:17,21,25 – Saul requires David to kill 100 Philistines in order to marry Michal. Saul hopes that in doing so that David will die by the hand of the Philistines.

9. 19:1 – Saul asks his servants to kill David.

10. 19:9-10 – Saul attacks David again with a javelin.
The Downfall of Saul

11. 20:32-33 – Saul tries to kill Jonathan (Saul isn’t a very good shot!)

13. 28:7 – Saul visits the Witch of Endor.

14. 31:4-6 – After being shot in battle, Saul kills himself.
The Election of King David

There are 3 narratives of the election of David to the throne

1. David is anointed by Samuel – 1 Samuel 16:1-13
2. David is chosen for his musical skills – 1 Samuel 16:14-23
3. David’s combat with Goliath raises his status to king – 1 Samuel 17
Textualization

There is general agreement that the final form of the work (David’s story in 1-2 Samuel) belongs to the period of the exile (586-540 BCE). On the other hand, dates for individual component units of the work vary from near the time of the events depicted to the time of final completion, a span of some 500 years.

The Temple Drama

Lehi left Jerusalem right when the temple was destroyed and the Temple Drama during the Feast of Tabernacles was lost. For Lehi and Sariah, the ceremony of the New Years Festival would have been vital. This ceremony was a renewal of the covenants that held their nation together – which reaffirmed the covenant with Jehovah and with the nation of Israel and her king. The temple rite culminated in an anointing ceremony where the king was adopted as a son and heir of Jehovah. Israel’s relationship with God was a covenant relationship, and the king was a living token of that relationship.

The Mesha Stone

Found in 1868 by F.A. Klein, written in Paleo-Hebrew, or Proto-Canaanite. Part of it reads, “I am Mesha, son of Chemosh(yat) king of Moab, the Dibonite. My father was king over Moab for thirty years and I was king after my father. I made this high place for Chemosh in Qarhoh, ... for he saved me from all the kings, and he allowed me to see the downfall of all my foes.”
The Mesha Stone

The Mesha Stone is a first person account by the same Mesha mentioned in 2 Kings 3, and in the inscription he reviewed the history of his country’s relations with Israel as well as recounted his victorious campaign. He writes, “Omri was the king of Israel and he oppressed Moab for many days, for Chemosh was angry with his land. And his son succeeded him, and he said: I too shall oppress Moab.”
Apart from its mention of some of the names and other details found in the biblical account, the inscription is noteworthy for its presentation of Chemosh, a god whose “anger” with his land results in oppression by foreigners. Chemosh also tells Mesha when the time is right to attack (“And Chemosh said to me: ‘Go take Nebo against Israel,’” line 14). These same two things were said of Israel’s God here and there in the Bible and feature as prominent motifs in the book of Judges. (James Kugel, How to Read the Bible, p. 537)

Sennacherib’s Prism – this details the conquests & annals of the leader of Assyria.

Date: 690 BCE
Found: 1830 AD
On Sennacherib's prism, he says this of Hezekiah: "As for the king of Judah, Hezekiah, who had not submitted to my authority, I besieged and captured forty-six of his fortified cities, along with many smaller towns, taken in battle with my battering rams. ... I took as plunder 200,150 people, both small and great, male and female, along with a great number of animals including horses, mules, donkeys, camels, oxen, and sheep. As for Hezekiah, I shut him up like a caged bird in his royal city of Jerusalem. I then constructed a series of fortresses around him, and I did not allow anyone to come out of the city gates."

Is the court history political propaganda?

Modern scholars believe that political propaganda appears in the Old Testament. The best example is the so-called Apology of David, which appears in 1 and 2 Samuel. Although the books of Samuel describe a protracted struggle for Israel’s throne between the house of Saul and the house of David (see 2 Sam. 2:8-3:5), we are told that David never lifted a finger to harm his challengers from Saul’s dynasty. Even the heir apparent from Saul’s family, Jonathan, loved David and realized that David should be the next king. When David’s military and political opponents—Saul, Jonathan, Abner, Ishbaal (or Ishbosheth)—begin to conveniently disappear one by one, we are assured again and again that David was innocent in these matters. When at last David slaughters the entire house of Saul— all seven of David’s remaining competitors for the throne— we are told that David did so only because God required it (2 Sam. 21). — Kenton Sparks, God’s Word in Human Words, p. 128

Jerusalem

By 34 B.C., under King Herod’s rule, ancient Jerusalem went through major redevelopment, crowned with the rebuilding of the Second Temple and a bigger Temple Mount. In 66 AD, the Great Jewish Revolt challenged Roman rule over Jerusalem, resulting in the destruction of the temple and the fall of Jerusalem by 70 CE.

Lust v. Love

Satan is the great counterfeiter. He tries to palm off lust as love. There is a simple test to detect the difference. Love is motivated by self-control, obedience to God’s moral laws, respect for others, and unselfishness. On the other hand, lust is motivated by disobedience, self-gratification, and lack of discipline. (Elder Tad Callister, The Lord’s Standard of Morality, Ensign, Mar. 2014, p. 48)

Civil War between Absalom & David

2 Samuel 15-18

Absalom slain in 2 Samuel 18 by Joab
Absalom was the best looking guy in all of Israel -- with some serious hair. He'd let it grow all year and then cut it, which he had to do each year because it got so darned heavy. One year's growth weighed 200 shekels. And how heavy is 200 shekels? Well, one shekel weighed about 11 grams. So Absalom's haircut trimmings weighed in at 2.2 kilograms, or about 4.8 pounds. A year.

How does this compare with normal human hair?
Judaic Hyperbole

An average head hair has a diameter of about 0.007 cm (70 micrometers) and grows 15 cm per year. And an average head has about 100,000 hair follicles on it. Since human hair has a density of 1.32 g/cm³, we can estimate the weight of an average person's yearly hair production. Weight = \( \pi \times (0.0035 \text{ cm})^2 \times 15 \text{ cm} \times 100,000 \text{ hairs} \times 1.32 \text{ g/cm}^3 = 76 \text{ g} \)

So an average person produces about 0.076 kilogram of hair annually -- about than 1/30th that of Absalom.

Of course Absalom wasn't an average person. He was, after all, the best looking guy in Israel. So maybe his hair was 30 times as thick or 20 times as dense as normal human hair.
Is Absalom safe?

The Chronicler has idealized David and Solomon. Anything in his source material (mainly Samuel and Kings) that might tarnish his picture of them is omitted. He makes no reference to the wars between Saul’s house and David, the negotiations with Abner, or the murders of Abner and Ish-Bosheth (2Sa 1–4). The Chronicler presents David as being immediately anointed king over all Israel after the death of Saul (ch. 11) and enjoying the total support of the people (11:10—12:40; see note on 3:1–9). Subsequent difficulties for David are also not recounted. No mention is made of David’s sin with Bathsheba, the crime and death of Amnon, the fratricide by Absalom and his plot against his father, the flight of David from Jerusalem, the rebellions of Sheba and Shimei, and other incidents that might diminish the glory of David’s reign (2Sa 11–20). David is presented without blemish, apart from the incident of the census (the Chronicler had a special purpose for including it; see ch. 21 and notes).

The Chronicler handles Solomon similarly. Solomon is specifically named in a divine oracle as David’s successor (22:7–10; 28:6). His accession to the throne is announced publicly by David and is greeted with the unanimous support of all Israel (chs. 28–29). No mention is made of the bedridden David, who must overturn the attempted coup by Adonijah at the last moment to secure the throne for Solomon. Nor is there mention that the military commander Joab and the high priest Abiathar supported Adonijah’s attempt (1Ki 1). Solomon’s execution of those who had wronged David (1Ki 2) is also omitted. The accession of Solomon is without competition or detracting incident. The account of his reign is devoted almost wholly to the building of the temple (2Ch 2–8), and no reference to his failures is included. No mention is made of his idolatry, his foreign wives or the rebellions against his rule (1Ki 11). Even the blame for the schism is removed from Solomon (1Ki 11:26–40; 12:1–4) and placed on the scheming of Jeroboam. Solomon’s image in Chronicles is such that he can be paired with David in the most favorable light (2Ch 11:17).

The Idealized Kings

The David and Solomon of the Chronicler, then, must be seen not only as the David and Solomon of history, but also as typifying the Messianic king of the Chronicler’s expectation.

Not only is there idealization of David and Solomon, but the author also appears to consciously adopt the account of the succession of Moses and Joshua as a model for the succession of David and Solomon:

Both David and Moses fail to attain their goals—one to build the temple and the other to enter the promised land. In both cases the divine prohibition is related to the appointment of a successor (22:5–13; 28:2–8; Dt 1:37–38; 31:2–8).

Both Solomon and Joshua bring the people of God into rest (22:8–9; Jos 11:23; 21:44).

There are a number of verbal parallels in the appointments of Solomon and Joshua (compare 22:11–13,16; 28:7–10,20;2Ch 1:1 with Dt 31:5–8,23; Jos 1:5,7–9).

When David began his reign as the new king in Jerusalem, this royal property would have devolved directly to him. He would have had no need to purchase it - it was already his. From the perspective of the biblical authors, however, it was important that David purchase the land - indeed, they depict Araunah as trying to give it to David as a gift, and David refusing. The depth of Israel’s connection to the site of the temple was such that no possibility could be allowed for anyone else to make a rightful claim on the property. The Roman-Era midrash Tanhuma sums up the centrality of and holiness of this site in Judaism:

As the navel is set in the centre of the human body, so is the land of Israel the navel of the world... situated in the centre of the world, and Jerusalem in the centre of the land of Israel, and the sanctuary in the centre of Jerusalem, and the holy place in the centre of the sanctuary, and the ark in the centre of the holy place, and the Foundation Stone before the holy place, because from it the world was founded.
